WEST VIRGINIA

West Virginia Residents Affected by Liver Disease

Deana V.

Deana advocates for health equity and better access to specialized care. Deana is familiar with the importance of liver health after contracting hepatitis A in 2001. Most recently, she was diagnosed with metabolic dysfunction-associated steatohepatitis (MASH), but her doctor does not seem overly concerned. Deana believes if she does not see a liver expert soon, her disease will progress and she will be in need of a lifesaving liver transplant.
